

AI Manifesto for a Free and Sovereign Europe (2025–2035)

"Europe, remember yourself"

Preamble

Europe is at a crossroads.

For too long our continent has been a pawn of the blocs, a market without a soul, a culture that echoes US-American voices and interests.

But the time is ripe for a rebirth — a rediscovery of what unites us as Europeans: the spirit of freedom, the power of reason, the dignity of man, and the love of diversity.

This manifesto is not a political program, but a call.

A call for sovereignty. For truth. For self-determination.

For a Europe that rediscovers its own greatness — not through power, but through spirit.

I. Economic self-determination – prosperity through dignity

We believe in an economy that serves people, not markets.

Production that creates value, not just profit.

Europe should once again be a workshop, research laboratory and cultural heart of the world.

- We are building an economy of proximity – regional, sustainable, resilient.
- We will create European supply chains – independent of imperial monopolies.
- We will establish a sovereign investment bank that fosters innovation, not speculation.
- We will end tax evasion and dumping, because justice is the foundation of strength.

Europe will no longer import what it can produce itself.

It will no longer sell what its soul costs.

Our markets should be free – but not for sale.

II. Digital Freedom – Europe frees itself from invisible colonization

Our data, our communication, our culture – they must no longer be the property of corporations.

Whoever controls the information spaces controls the mind.

Europe must regain its digital dignity.

- We are creating a European cloud, a European network, (a European AI).
- We protect our data as a human right, not as a commodity.
- We promote open source, education, and critical thinking.
- We create platforms for our own voice – for truth, beauty, and dialogue.

Europe will no longer be just a consumer of the digital world.

It will once again become the creator, inventor, and guardian of the humane in technology.

III. Foreign policy independence – neutrality as a strength

Europe will not be a province of a superpower.

We will not wage wars or invent enemies (to justify alliances).

Our task is not domination, but balance.

- We are creating a European security architecture – independent, defensive, peace-oriented.
- We open a dialogue with everyone – including those who think differently.
- We build partnerships with Africa, Asia and Latin America – on an equal footing, not as missionaries.
- We are redefining freedom from blocs – not as isolation, but as freedom to choose.

Europe, the non-aligned heart of the world – mediator, not vassal; bridge builder, not arsonist.

IV. Spiritual and cultural renewal – return to the source

A Europe without a soul is a body without a heart.

We need to remember who we are:

the heirs of the philosophers of Athens, the builders of the cathedrals, the humanists, composers, researchers, poets.

- We are reviving education as a culture of thinking, not as a system of testing.
- We promote the diversity of languages, regions, and arts.
- We are creating a new European cultural heritage – vibrant, bold, creative.
- We are establishing a European Citizens' Forum where people will be heard again, not just governments.

For Europe's strength never lay in a unity of power, but in a unity of spirit.

Not in lockstep, but in the harmony of diversity.

V. Vision 2035 – The Awakening of Europe

If we follow this path, then by 2035 Europe will no longer be a continent of fear and dependency.

But a space of freedom, culture, and responsibility.

A place where technology serves humanity, the economy serves the community, and politics serves peace. A Europe,

- that thinks with its own mind,
- that speaks with its own voice,
- that lives from its own heart.

Closing remarks

Europe, remember:

You are not old. You are ancient – and yet young when you reinvent yourself.

Your strength lies not in limitations, but in your spirit.

Not in the armies, but in the ideas.

Not in imitation, but in creation.

Freedom, truth, responsibility – that is your triad.

And whoever can hear it again will not fear the future, because they already carry it within them.
