

The European Transcontinental Initiative (ETI)

For a sovereign, non-aligned and united Europe – a bridge between East and West

Initial situation – A continent between the blocs

A rift runs right through our wonderful continent – between geopolitical interests, military alliances, and economic dependencies. The vision of a shared, peaceful continent seems to have faded.

But history teaches us: Europe has always been strongest when it was a bridge – not a bulwark.

The European Transcontinental Initiative (ETI) arises from the conviction that that the continent can only secure its future if it is freed from the logic of blocks and a new one, pan-European order based on dialogue, neutrality and mutual respect.

Europe must no longer be It could be a playground for US interests or even a military staging ground against Russia, in order to forcibly reassert the long-lost US hegemony..

By reflecting on its own roots and traditions, it acts as the architect of its own future as neutral, sovereign mediator in international conflicts and peaceful transcontinental Actor.

Guiding principle – Europe as a space of peace, not of fronts

ETI is not an organization against anyone – it is a movement for something:

For peace, neutrality, and the independence of the European continent. Their vision is:

"A Europe without enemy images – a continent of understanding between West and East."

The goal is to Emergence of a new European order, which:

- non-military, but thinks diplomatically,
- not exclusive, but acts in an integrative way,
- not split, but is sovereign and diverse.

In this concept, Europe does not refer to the EU, but rather...the entire continent – from Portugal to Russia, from Iceland to Armenia.

Because geographically, historically, and culturally, Europe is a space of diversity – and also of togetherness.

Basic principles of ETI

The European Transcontinental Initiative rests on five fundamental pillars:

Non-alignment and neutrality

Europe should be neither a western nor an eastern power bloc.

His sovereignty consists in this: not to be forced to take sides.

Neutrality here does not mean passivity, but active mediation – Europe as a place of dialogue, not threats.

Dialogue instead of isolation

The ETI creates forums for political, cultural and economic understanding between all states of the continent.

Instead of spirals of sanctions and security fears, Spaces for cooperation and mechanisms of trust built.

Peace through economic networking

Trade, infrastructure, energy and science are used as bridges to peace.

Projects such as a "Transcontinental Economic and Energy Zone" promote exchange and stability – from the Atlantic to the Urals."

Sovereignty in technology and resources

Europe is securing its independence in key areas: energy, digitalization, and education.

Instead of relying on global corporations, it is building its own infrastructures on – communal, sustainable, social.

Cultural understanding and identity

European peace grows from memory:

from shared history, languages, arts, and philosophy.

ETI understands culture as a link of the continent – as that which unites people across borders.

Structure and implementation

The ETI aims to overcome existing institutions of the technocratic, undemocratic EU, and build a higher-level network, which unites all European states and societies, regardless of alliances, religions or political systems.

Political level

- European Transcontinental Conference (ETC): Annual summit of government and civil society representatives to coordinate joint peace and development strategies.
- Peace Secretariat in Vienna or Geneva: neutral coordination office for diplomatic contacts and crisis mediation.
- Council of the Regions: A union of regional parliaments and cities as the voice of the citizens.

Economic level

- Transcontinental cooperation zones in energy, mobility, science and environmental technology.
- New “European Silk Road”– sustainable infrastructure projects between West and East, North and South.
- European Fund for Joint Investments in the Future, financed through contributions and bonds to promote strategic independence.

Socio-cultural level

- European Civic Academy for Peace and Dialogue, a network of universities, think tanks and NGOs.
- Transcontinental Cultural Programs, the exchange in art, music, philosophy and Promoting history.

European Youth Initiative “Generation Bridge”, to create new networks beyond political boundaries.

Vision 2030 – A sovereign continent of understanding

The vision of the European Transcontinental Initiative is long-term.

She sees the year 2030 as an interim goal – a Europe that is no longer divided into blocs, but into Cooperation zones and organized communication spaces.

The following goals should be achieved by then:

- Institutionalized transcontinental dialogue, which includes all European states.
- Reduction of military tensions through confidence-building, disarmament and communication.
- Peace-based infrastructure: Transport, energy and communication networks that economically connect West and East.
- European Cultural Partnership, understands shared history as a resource for reconciliation.

A new geopolitical self-understanding:

Europe as third, sovereign pole– independent, humanistic, peace-oriented.

The European mission – The rediscovery of the center

Europe lies geographically between worlds – and therein lies its destiny.

The continent, once divided by wars, can become a Space of balance and encounter.

Between the extremes of power and dependence, of West and East, Europe can develop its true strength: the measure. The European Transcontinental Initiative is an expression of a new European maturity – a vision that recognizes that Peace is not forced, but shaped.

Europe should no longer be a border – but a bridge.

A bridge between cultures. A bridge between languages. A bridge between systems.

His freedom lies in this center –

And in his freedom lies the future of the world.
